SERVICE--That's It

It is a well known fact that when it comes to Fire Insurance, there is no difference in the rate charged per $100 by all the reputable companies, but it is a fact that the rate charged by agents who are not on the job—the kind who are writing insurance principally for the commission-could often be reduced materially if certain hanges were made and the agent wh knows, and is not in the business sole y for commissions, will, at least advise his clients how a rate can be re duced. Service of this kind is and has always been my specialty, and I have saved hundreds of dollars for my clients. Some of them, in fact the majority, have appreciated it, but some have not, but I will continue the policy because it is right. I do not ask for business on any other ground than value received. One of the most serious handicaps of the business is that after a minimum rate has been secured and policies issued correctly, the novice can issue a policy just as well duced. Service of this kind is and has novice can issue a policy just as well as the expert, and some insurees will
